

Call for application for EFMI Bursaries for HEC 2016 (MIE 2016), Munich, Germany

To promote high attendance and also in order to ensure equal chance to participate at EFMI conferences regardless to economic and social situation, EFMI decided to offer bursaries for participants with accepted full papers at MIE or STC conferences.

The bursaries' aim is to encourage young and/or financially challenged colleagues to participate in EFMI's conferences. Priority will be given to young scientists.

Bursaries will cover conference fee (at student rate). Travel, accommodation and subsistence will not be covered by the bursaries.

All individuals belonging to one of EFMI's national associations, wishing to take part in an EFMI's conference, is entitled to apply for a bursary. Applications will be evaluated and judged by the Bursary Committee. The following conditions should be met in order to get supported:

In order to accept their application, applicants must declare the following:

- The financial barrier is the only reason holding the applicant from registering.
- The applicant has sufficient resources to cover travel expenses and lodging.
- The applicant is an MI professional, MI user, or a student (undergraduate or a student for a Master of Science) studying in a relevant academic institution.
- The conference corresponds with the applicant's major activities (or studies).
- It is preferred that the applicant's employer/institute/university supports their participation in the conference (with or without financial support).

Applicants should fill the attached application form, and provide all relevant documents that helps Bursary Committee to make fair judgement on applications.

Applications should be sent to the Bursaries Committee Chair Professor John Mantas, email: jmantas@nurs.uoa.gr

Deadline for application: May 10, 2016.
